Download our free wheel selector, which will guide you through all the different types of wheels and materials associated with the correct application. The easiest way to find the right wheel for the right application. Download the free selector here If you need to move pallets throughout a warehouse or in your store, then it's essential for you to have pallet jacks. This type of equipment lifts the pallets off the floor and moves them on wheels. Use the following guidelines to determine where to find used pallets jacks.Go to an Industrial Supply CompanyMany industrial supply companies provide businesses with new and used products to help them operate more efficiently. These solutions not only offer businesses opportunities to achieve their goals, but also do so in a cost-effective manner. Many of these companies offer used products to their customers so that they can stick to their budgets.Research Local Industrial Supply CompaniesThere are a wide variety of industrial supply companies throughout the country offering new and used pallet jacks. It's essential to look for one that's local to your business. Otherwise, you'll face hefty shipping charges. If the supply company is close enough, you can even pick up the pallet jacks yourself.Look for a Pallet Jack ManufacturerMany pallet jack manufacturers also sell used pallet jacks. They often buy back these used pallet jacks from businesses who are purchasing newer models. They then offer the second-hand pallet jacks and pallet jack parts to consumers who are seeking a cost-effective alternative to buying new. Search Within Your LocaleWhen researching used pallet jacks for sale from a manufacturing company, be sure to search within your locale. That way, you can inspect the pallet jacks and ensure they're of the quality you're seeking. If you're looking for a specific brand, like Yale pallet jacks, you can check to see if those are available as second-hand offerings.Use Second-Hand and Yard Sale SitesMany yard sales sites and second-hand seller sites like eBay will sell used pallet jacks. You can search by keyword, and can also further refine your searches by price and location. When viewing results, be sure the listings include several clear pictures and a detailed description. Don't make a commitment to send any money until you have inspected the used pallet jack. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET After deciding between a manual or electric pallet jack, the second most important decision you'll make is what type of wheels you'll use. Choose the wrong wheel, and you'll end up spending way too much replacing the wheels again and again. Learn how to choose the best wheels for your pallet jack and your workplace conditions. Nylon Vs. Polyurethane Pallet Jack Wheels Hand pallet trucks have four wheels. There are two small wheels recessed into the forks (called the load wheels) and larger, swiveling wheels on the handle side (steer wheels). For most operations, the choice will be between nylon or polyurethane (if you're using the pallet jack primarily outdoors, rubber steer wheels are the way to go). Pros and Cons of Nylon Pallet Jack WheelsThe nylon pallet jack wheels engineered by Toyota are designed to handle rough conditions such as debris-filled semi-truck trailers, containers and cold freezers. The two main drawbacks of nylon wheels are that they are louder than other wheels and more likely to mark floors. Nylon pallet truck wheels are: Ideal for cold, rough or wet or floors Chemical-resistant Puncture-resistant Durable Louder than other wheel types Pros and Cons of Polyurethane Pallet Jack WheelsPolyurethane wheels are designed to be non-marking (won't scratch floors) and quieter than nylon wheels. They are ideal for a retail-only environment. A few too many trips out to a wet loading dock or across rough pavement will cause polyurethane wheels to break down. Polyurethane pallet truck wheels are: Better for retail floors Quieter than nylon wheels Less-marking Can be damaged by rough floors, debris How to Choose Between Nylon and Polyurethane Wheels What if you need your pallet truck to unload trailers and operate in a retail environment? If your budget allows, the best option is to get two pallet jacks - one with nylon wheels for your distribution area, and one with polyurethane wheels for your retail space. The next best option is to decide whether your customers will be bothered by marks on the floor. If clean floors are a concern, you might be fine with durable nylon wheels if you only use the pallet jack during off-hours and ensure there's time for staff to clean up any marks left behind. Another important question to ask is how clean (and debris-free) are the floors in your warehouse or distribution area? The main concern with polyurethane wheels is that they don't hold up well to rough surfaces. If your pallet truck will have to go through rough areas, don't waste your money on polyurethane wheels because you'll be replacing them a lot. If you're still feeling undecided, give us a call.
